Qualification system

The qualification system has been prepared jointly by the International Olympic Committee (IOC), Panam Sports and the Pan American Boxing Confederation. Qualification will be as follows:

1. 1 quota per weight category for the NOCs that won in Cali 2021 (see “Cali 2021 Quotas” section).
2. 1 quota per weight category for Chile as host country.
3. The finalists of each weight category in the Asuncion 2022 South American Games (SAG 2022).
4. The finalists of each weight category in the El Salvador 2023 Central American and Caribbean Games (2023 CACG)
5. 4 quotas per gender for each weight category in the Qualification Championship for the NOCs that have not qualified yet (including the USA and CAN). Only the countries that have not qualified yet will be able to participate in this qualification event.

If the two finalists of the South American or Central American and Caribbean Games belong to an NOC that is already qualified, the quotas will be for the two NOCs that placed third.

If only one of the finalists of the South American or Central American and Caribbean Games belongs to an NOC that is already qualified, the bronze medal winners must dispute the second qualification quota in a combat between them. The result of this combat will be for qualification purposes only and will not change the fact that both athletes won a bronze medal and placed third in the South American or Central American and Caribbean Games.

Qualification for the Santiago 2023 Pan American Games is for the NOC, which will be responsible for determining the athletes who will participate in the Games.

The quota allocation per weight category according to the qualification system is as follows:
